COMMERCIAL OFFICE MARKET

Vigorous Leasing by New Tenants Drives Strong Quarter

The Lower Manhattan market started the year with a bolt out of the gates. Robust commercial leasing, totaling 1.6 million square feet year-to-date, yielded the best first quarter in more than a decade. First quarter leasing was 44% higher than the five-year average. This quarter builds on last year’s momentum — 7% of the district's inventory was leased in 2013, which was above Midtown and Midtown South’s 6.3%.

1st quarter leasing up 18% year-over-year

Recent activity shows a strong and continued appetite among existing tenants and those new to the market who are taking big blocks of office space. In the first quarter, the downtown market saw four deals over 100,000 square feet, including Macmillan Science and Education’s lease of 176,000 square feet at 1 New York Plaza and Teach for America’s 172,000-square foot lease at 25 Broadway. There were also two renewals: Amerigroup’s 165,000 square feet at 14 Wall Street and Allied World Insurance Company’s renewal and expansion in 142,000 square feet at 199 Water Street. Other large deals involving tenants coming to Lower Manhattan from elsewhere included Revlon’s lease of 90,200 square feet at 1 New York Plaza (the firm is moving from Midtown). WeWork, a provider of shared office space, expanded in the first quarter by...
42,000 square feet, taking up a total of 250,000 square feet in Lower Manhattan and becoming one of the district’s largest tenants.

Relocations fueled the quarter’s brisk activity. The migratory flow has strongly favored the downtown market over the last few years. Since 2011, there has been a total of 6.9 million square feet of relocations to Lower Manhattan and 1.9 million square feet of relocations from Lower Manhattan to other areas — this represents a net gain of about 5 million square feet.¹ The TAMI (technology, advertising, media, information) sector led the charge for newcomers in Lower Manhattan this quarter accounting for 29% of leasing activity, compared to 21%.

“Downtown is no longer the leverage option, but increasingly, the first, and best option.”² last year. Additionally, the TAMI sector’s share of leasing in Lower Manhattan was on par with Midtown South’s 30% share and greater than Midtown’s 22% share this quarter. Since 2011, TAMI has spurred nearly half of all relocation deals in Lower Manhattan (47%), the biggest share of any sector.

TAMI is not only driving growth in Lower Manhattan — it is cementing the district’s identity as a dynamic new center for media and creative companies. Among them is Macmillan Science and Education, whose Lower Manhattan lease was the quarter’s largest overall deal. Another was Library Journal, which signed for 11,700 square feet at 123 William Street, relocating from Midtown South. These deals came in the wake of a succession of TAMI migrations to Lower Manhattan over the past year, including Condé Nast’s second lease downtown (80,000 square feet at 222 Broadway) and HarperCollins Publishers’ lease of 181,000 square feet at 195 Broadway.

There is no rest for WeWork. Headquartered at 222 Broadway, the growing national and international provider of shared office space continues to expand their footprint in Lower Manhattan. More than 300 Technology, Advertising, Media and Information (TAMI) companies work in WeWork locations downtown. The company’s ambitious plans are a reflection of the district’s exuberant entrepreneurial spirit and undeniable allure among start-ups and new creative companies.

They opened their first Lower Manhattan location at 222 Broadway in August 2013 and signed their second lease in 25 Broadway in September 2013. After just six months, they expanded in the first quarter of 2014, taking an additional 42,000 square feet at 25 Broadway, where it now occupies 129,000 square feet (known as Charging Bull, the office looks out on Arturo DiModica’s famous bull sculpture). WeWork has 11 locations and a total footprint of 650,000 square feet in New York City. The firm has 26 total national locations and 1 international location in London.
The tech community is a particularly active segment of TAMI and continues to expand throughout the district, as more startups and established tech firms make Lower Manhattan their home. Dev Bootcamp, a software coding school, signed a lease for 14,200 square feet at 48 Wall Street (the school also has locations in San Francisco and Chicago). Pixable, a social media photo aggregator and sorter, signed a lease for 6,900 square feet at 100 Wall Street and will be relocating from Midtown South.  Who is TAMI? And why is she so popular?

TAMI refers to a set of sectors that include Technology, Advertising, Media and Information. They have been identified as growth sectors in New York City and important drivers for leasing activity in Lower Manhattan. They are evaluated together because they share a robust exchange of ideas, as well as a labor force, customer base and audience.

TAMI tenants look to join communities with a similar talent composition. Lower Manhattan is increasingly a location choice for TAMI tenants: 29% of Q1 2014 leasing came from TAMI tenants, while 16% was from the FIRE sector. Lower Manhattan is an ideal location for TAMI tenants, because of the tremendous access to labor. The area’s extensive transportation network provides access to over 500,000 creative and professional workers within a 30-minute commute, which includes parts of Brooklyn, the New Jersey Gold Coast and Manhattan.
tenant base include beauty and cosmetics icon Revlon, which is relocating from Midtown, and the New York Film Academy, which is expanding its Lower Manhattan presence with a 43,000 square-foot lease at 25 Broadway (and a total footprint of 118,000 square feet).

Robust Leasing Keeps Vacancy Rate in Check

Lower Manhattan’s brisk leasing is keeping its vacancy rate down, even as a substantial amount of new office space comes onto the market. Since last quarter, the vacancy rate, which counts space available within six months, fell 1% to settle at 11.2%. The drop was caused by the positive absorption of 933,000 square feet of space in the first quarter. Even with the addition of new space at One World Trade Center, the district’s availability rate — including space that will be available within the next twelve months — remains stable over last year and last quarter. The availability rate was 14 percent last quarter, down significantly from its 2013 peak of 15.8%.3

Strong Market Bumps Rents Up

Strong demand from tenants seeking quality space for a lower price than Midtown and Midtown South is pushing rents slightly higher, according to landlords. Lower Manhattan landlords reported re-pricing about 1.43 million square feet — or about 12% of available space — in the first quarter, in response to the area’s growing popularity. The highest increase came in Class B rents, which rose 5% over last quarter to $38 per square foot, now up 8% year-over-year. Class A rents climbed just 1% since last quarter, but are up 18% year-over-year. The addition of new Class A space at the World Trade Center in 2013 has largely nudged the rents upward. Pricing in Lower Manhattan continues to inch up, but remains distinctly competitive. The district’s overall asking rent of $49 per square foot is $11 less than Midtown South and $21 less than Midtown.

Investors Bullish on Lower Manhattan Office Buildings

A wave of strong investor activity — in office buildings along Lower Broadway — gave commercial office sales a big boost this quarter. The sale of these office buildings demonstrates the increasing value of a Lower Manhattan businesses address — all of these owners have announced plans to maintain office uses rather than convert to residential. This follows a recent surge: $2.9 billion in sales traded in 2013, up from $1.9 billion in 2012. Below are a few notable office deals:

- In January, William Macklowe purchased 156 William Street, a 250,000-square-foot office building for $62.5 million, or about $250 per square foot, with plans to rebrand the building for medical offices.

- Emmes Realty is contracted to purchase 160 Water Street — a 480,000-square-foot property — for $160 million, or about $333 per square foot, from Oestreicher Realty. Currently about 96% leased, 160 Water’s major tenants include the Beth Israel Medical Center and the New York City Health and Hospitals Corporation. Emmes Realty also owns the adjacent property, 180 Water Street, which it purchased in 2013.

- Harbor Group International purchased 55 Broadway — a 336,000-square-foot tower — for $157 million, or about $467 per square foot, from Broad Street Development. The purchase price represents a 91% increase from its last sale price of $82 million in 2006.

- RXR Realty purchased 61 Broadway — a 33-story, 787,000-square-foot office tower — for $330 million, or about $419 per square foot, from Broad Street Development. RXR Realty plans to improve the property to attract tech and creative companies. This sale price represents a 150% increase from the last sale price in 2004, $130 million.

- Normandy Real Estate Partners has entered into negotiations to purchase 65 Broadway, a 350,000-square-foot office building, on behalf of Asian investors. The potential sale price has not been announced, but it is estimated to be north of $100 million. It was last sold for $15.8 million in 2006.

RETAIL MARKET

Lower Manhattan is being transformed, seemingly overnight, into New York City’s hottest shopping and dining destination. As major capital improvements near completion, more than 1.55 million square feet of new or repositioned retail is coming online within the next two years, amid brisk demand from retailers. Strong interest from tenants and an increasing optimism about the health of the market have spurred a notable increase in rents.

Rents Rise as Offerings Expand

The average asking rent on the the lower Broadway corridor saw the largest quarterly increase in Manhattan retail market, rising 41% from $198 per square foot at the end of 2012 to $280 per square foot at the beginning of 2014. Across the city, the average asking rent increased 16 percent compared to this time last year.

A reflection of the rising interest in the Lower Manhattan market, fourteen retailers have opened new establishments this quarter. This brings the district’s total to 979 stores and restaurants. Below are some highlights.

Food

- Wogies, a sports bar specializing in Philly cheesesteaks, opened at 44 Trinity Place.
- Tres Carnes, a fast-casual Mexican eatery, opened at 101 Maiden Lane.
- Gregory’s Coffee opened at 42 Broadway and 100 Wall Street and will open soon at 80 Broad Street.
- Bareburger and Melt Shop will soon join other restaurants at 111 Fulton Street.
- Neapolitan Express, a popular pizza food truck, will open its first brick-and-mortar location at 40 Wall Street.

Retail

- Urban Outfitters opened at the base of a new Pace residence hall at 182 Broadway.
- Emily Thompson Flowers relocated from Dumbo to 142 Beekman Street at the Seaport.

5 Source of retail rents: CBRE
- Gap will join Zara and Urban Outfitters along Broadway with a 19,000-square-foot retail store at the base of the Marriott Residence Inn at 170 Broadway. In fact, the Gap’s lease was about 50% larger than its typical flagship store, even as the company is shrinking its portfolio around the country.

- Cipriani will expand its empire with the opening of an event venue in the Great Hall at 25 Broadway. The storied, 28,000-square-foot space is where passengers once bought tickets for Cunard Steamship Lines.

Retail Property Sales

Crown Acquisitions, the Carlyle Group, Tribeca Associates and Highgate Holdings entered into contract to sell a 20,000-square-foot retail condominium at the base of 170 Broadway that includes a basement, ground, mezzanine and second floor. The purchase price is about $70 million, or $3,500 per square foot, 27% higher than the price paid for the entire building in 2011. In late March, the Gap signed a lease for about 18,900 square feet in the retail space. The asking rent for the ground floor space was about $600 per square foot. 170 Broadway is in the process of being converted to a 243-room Marriott Residence Inn and is scheduled to open in 2014.

Thor Equities purchased a 16,000-square-foot retail condominium unit from an affiliate of Time Equities at 38 Park Row for $11.08 million. The space is anchored by Starbucks and is on the ground floor of an 11-story residential co-op building.

Major Projects Creating a New Retail Destination

Several big projects that have been underway for years will take big strides in 2014 and 2015. These include an upgrade and expansion of 200,000 square feet of retail at Brookfield Place that is scheduled for completion in 2014/2015. Brookfield has continued with retail leasing at the revamped complex, and this quarter, added luxury retailer Diane von Furstenberg and e-commerce menswear shop Bonobos. This spring will see the opening of Brookfield Place’s Hudson Eats, which will feature 14 fast-casual eateries, including Mighty Quinn’s, Umami Burger, Blue Ribbon Sushi, and Black Seed. “Le District”, a 25,000-square-foot French marketplace is scheduled to open at the end of 2014. Diners will also find six notable restaurants, including Parm and Rosa Blanca.
A lot is happening on Broadway — Lower Broadway, that is. A flurry of investment, leasing and new retail development projects have enlivened Lower Manhattan’s well-traveled north-south thoroughfare this quarter.

Among numerous commitments from office and retail investors, RXR Realty purchased 61 Broadway for $330 million and plans to position the property for new tech and creative companies. This sale price represents a striking 150% increase from the last sale price in 2004, when it went for $130 million.

It’s not the only example of substantial price increases. Harbor Group International bought 55 Broadway for $157 million, a 91% jump in sale price from the last time the building changed hands in 2006, when it was sold for $82 million. The potential sale of 65 Broadway to Normandy Real Estate Partners on behalf of Asian investors is also notable. The deal price was not disclosed, but the property is estimated to be north of $100 million. It was last sold in 2006 for $15.8 million.

A number of significant office leases were signed at 25 Broadway this quarter. Among them: Teach for America’s lease for 172,000 square feet; WeWork’s 42,000-square-foot expansion, which complements their existing lease for 86,300 square feet and creates a total presence of 128,000 square feet in the building; and Cipriani’s lease for 28,000 square feet at 25 Broadway’s Great Hall, which will be the renowned hospitality brand’s second Lower Manhattan location.
TOURISM & HOSPITALITY

Lower Manhattan Hotels Taking a Bigger Bite of the Big Apple’s Hospitality Business

Hotel developers have clearly recognized the opportunities in Lower Manhattan and are bringing a range of service types to the neighborhood – from budget and luxury to boutique and extended-stay. This quarter, InterContinental Hotel Group’s Hotel Indigo announced plans to open a 190-room hotel at 10-12 Maiden Lane. 6-10 Water Street was sold by hotel developer Sam Chang to Rhode Island-based Magna Hospitality Developer for $44.3 million; plans have been filed to demolish the existing structure. Howard Hughes Corporation entered into contract to buy 80 South Street, a 8,128-square-foot parcel at South and Fletcher streets. Plans have already been approved for a 1,000-foot-tall residential and hotel tower designed by Santiago Calatrava and Morali Architects to be located on the site.

Eight hotels will open within the next year, adding over 1,500 rooms to the district — a 37 percent increase over the existing inventory of 4,092 rooms. There are 15 hotels currently under construction, and another 3 in the planning stages. All told, these will add 3,700 new rooms to the market by 2016, doubling the total hotel room inventory in Lower Manhattan.

With just 4% of current hotel room inventory citywide, Lower Manhattan’s upcoming hotel projects comprise 20% of the city’s hotel construction pipeline. This will result in a dramatic expansion of Lower Manhattan’s share of the hotel market, a fitting development for the nation’s 4th largest Central Business District. In the space of 10 years — between 2006 and 2016 — it is estimated that Lower Manhattan will see an astounding 318 percent increase in its number of hotel rooms.

Hotel Market Follows Citywide Trends

In the first quarter, Lower Manhattan’s hotel market metrics trended similarly to those citywide: the Average Daily Room Rate (ADR) and occupancy were down from last quarter, as the market entered the slow winter season. Occupancy rates remained stable over 2013, and Lower Manhattan began the year with a 72% average occupancy rate in the first quarter. Unchanged from one year ago, Lower Manhattan’s $247 ADR retained its historical premium over the citywide average of $212.

New Developments Diversifying Inventory, Nurturing Population Growth

Lower Manhattan’s 61,000 residents live in 30,500 units in 323 mixed-use and residential buildings. The pipeline of upcoming residential development includes 2,288 units in nine buildings that are under construction. GFI Capital Resource’s Beekman Residences, a hotel condominium building with 68 residential units at 5 Beekman Street, began construction this quarter, while Lighthouse Group began demolition of the existing structures at 112-120 Fulton Street in order to start building a 60-story tower with 460 condo units. Construction continues on both Silverstein Properties’ Four Season Residences and a 159-unit condo building at 30 Park Place. Rose Associates’ 70 Pine Street, comprising 644 rental units, is expected to be completed in the fall of 2014.

Reflecting Lower Manhattan’s growing student population, construction continued on Pace University’s 725-bed residence hall at 33 Beekman Street, with completion expected in 2015.

More than 550 upcoming units across six buildings are in the planning stages. Trinity Real Estate announced plans to convert 74 Trinity Place into residential and office space. The Brauser Group is planning to start construction this summer on a 23-story residential tower that will replace a parking garage at 54 Fulton Street.

Lower Manhattan Sales Market Hits All-Time Price Per Square Foot High

The sales market was robust this quarter, with pricing hitting a 25-year high. The Lower Manhattan set an all-time record in the first quarter, with average pricing reaching $1,376 per square foot, up 32.8% from the same period last year. The overall Manhattan average also hit a record this quarter, reaching $1,363. Sales were buoyant throughout the winter, with total Lower Manhattan sales up 22% over last year.

Lower Manhattan Rental Market Stable

The district’s rental market held steady in the first quarter, much like the rest of Manhattan. But Lower Manhattan ended the first quarter with rents above the Manhattan-wide average. The district’s median rent remained stable year-over-year at $3,450, and the average rental price per square foot remained about the same year-over-year at $56. Despite the higher prices, Lower Manhattan’s vacancy rate actually dropped since last quarter to 1.54%—the same rate seen Manhattan-wide.

Residential Property Sales

The first quarter saw several notable property sales. Carmel Partners purchased 15 Cliff Street, a 157-unit residential rental building between Fulton and John Streets, from Lazerian Properties. The price was $95 million, or about $600 per square foot. Pace University bought the 124,000-square-foot dormitory portion of 180 Broadway from SL Green Realty for $42.1 million. The 24-story, 600-bed dormitory opened this past fall. The building’s 25,000-square-foot commercial space—with two tenants, Urban Outfitters and TD Bank—was retained by owner SL Green.

Project replaced all underground utilities (including water mains, sewers, electric and gas), while new streets, curbs, sidewalks, signage and lighting were installed;

The last section, from Pearl to Water Street, will be finished in spring 2014.

Broadway Reconstruction

Broadway 1, a $42 million capital reconstruction project by the Department of Design and Construction (DDC), is underway on Broadway, stretching from Ann Street to Rector Street;

All underground infrastructure – including water mains, sewers, electric, gas and other utilities – will be replaced, as well as constructing new streets and curbs;

Work proceeds on the east side, between Liberty and Rector Street, and will continue through May 2014. Full project is scheduled to be finished in 2017.
